

Lehigh University Partnership for Sustainable UN Missions

Lehigh University Partnership for Sustainable UN Missions is a voluntary program designed for Missions based in New York to integrate sustainable practices into the workplace. Missions will have the opportunity to work with the UN Sustainable Environment team to identify tangible ways to bring the Greening the Blue framework into their offices. Participating Missions will establish themselves as global leaders by setting the precedent for global sustainable change.

How does a Mission become certified?

1

Getting Started

Upon demonstrating interest, the Mission will identify a point of contact to arrange an on-site meeting with the Lehigh project team.

2

Baseline Survey

After the initial meeting, the Mission will complete a baseline survey to determine its current status of sustainability measures. Lehigh project team will be available upon request to assist in completion of the survey.

3

Consultation

In a second meeting, the Lehigh project team will review the baseline survey, discuss potential areas of improvement, and determine next steps.

4

Implementation

The Mission will implement the discussed areas of improvement with support from the Lehigh project team.

5

Results

The Mission will report on actions taken. The Lehigh project team will produce a final report that highlights the results, impacts and best practices of the Mission.

6

Recognition

Lehigh project team recognizes the Mission's efforts.
